

Start with a problem or question to be solved. This is the first step in the scientific method.